Ireland

On January 1st 2009 at 11am we will have a mass for Amy to mark one year since her disappearance in Holy Trinity Church Donaghmede.

At 12 we will be releasing a flock of White Doves to represent Peace & Unity. Two pink balloons will be released by Amy's Dad Christopher & Brother Dean to Mark one year since Amy's disappearance and 98 Blue & White balloons will be released by the family and friends for the protection by Our Lady for Amy and her family and all missing people

Spain

Amy's close friend Ashley has arranged for Amy's friends to meet at the dirt track to have a one minutes silence and to light candles for Amy at the same time as Ireland. After the one minutes silence they will play the song "Little Angel" Dedicated to Amy and all missing people. Little Angel by Donna Marie & Breeze 52 is helping Amy's Dad & Aunt raise funds to hire a private detective to keep the search for Amy going. Little Angel can be downloaded To download "Little Angel" from Ireland text 'music 1546' to 57501 text cost 99 cent.

England

Ashley has also organized with Amy's friends that have moved back to England and who are back in England for holidays over Christmas to also have a one minutes silence for Amy at the same time as Ireland and Spain.

Letter to Amy from her best friend Ashley

Dear Amy,

I logged onto your bebo page today and looked at the pictures of last Christmas. We looked so happy.

They made me remember all the good times we spent together. I left you a message, telling you all about how boring school is. I know you won't reply though. You never do.

It's been a year since you went missing, an every day since has been empty. We were so close- how could it not be?

When you first disappeared I told myself you'd taken off with some new friend, or a new boy. You were 15, and always out at some club, or chatting to people. I was sure you'd ring any minute to tell me about your latest crazy adventure. But you didn't.

When the police turned up at my house a few days later, I got scared. It suddenly seemed so serious. "Just tell us where she is" they said over and over again- even though I told them I didn't know. It was like they thought I had something to do with it!

I felt sick. I wanted them to be out looking for you - not to be sat around questioning me. They thought you'd run away and I knew where you were. I wished I did. Wherever it was, I'd have been there.

I knew you hadn't run - because you hadn't been in touch. We were so close there was no way you would leave without telling me. I'd slept with my phone under my pillow, praying you'd text or call. But the weeks went by and I didn't hear from you. I'd log onto your bebo page, hoping for some sign you were ok. But there was nothing, apart from messages from your family and friends, begging you to get in touch. The ones from your Dad on www.bebo.com/helpfinda broke my heart. He wrote, "Hi Amy its dad. Its nearly 8 weeks since you disappeared and im going out of my mind with worry."

every day id obsessively replay the day you went missing, trying to remember if you'd given me any clues. But there was nothing. It was just a normal day in town- you dragging me into burger king, us arranging to meet at mine the next day. But you never came. And when I called to find out where you were your mum said you hadn't come home the night before.

Every day is coloured by your disappearance. When friends come around for a sleepover, I think "Amy should be here with us". It feels like there's a big you-shaped hole in my life - like everyone else has got there best friend and they forget that mine is missing. Sometimes I need to be alone because I don't think they understand. I don't want to get a new boyfriend - not when I can't share it with you.

Your 16th birthday in February was so hard. You should have been with me, chatting about your party. But even though you weren't around I wanted to make a big fuss over you. Me and your other friends got balloons and wrote "Happy sweet 16 Amy" on them. We took them to our tree - the one where we used to sit and talk for hours - and let them go. I'd hoped you would find one and realise how much we missed you.

It sounds awful but sometimes I'd wish there was bad news, just so I'd know what happened. I feel like im in limbo. But most of all, I just want you back.

If you're reading this Amy, please get in touch. Your not in trouble and shouldn't be scared to come home - every one misses you so much.

I've arranged a gathering of your friends on the anniversary of the day you went missing, so we can remember how special you are. I'll never forget you, Amy, and I'll make sure no one else does either.

All my love
Ashley xxx
